Georgetown Diabetes Chief and MyCareTeam Chief Medical Advisor Launches Diabetes Radio Show

XM Radio Country Music show features Dr. Stephen C. Clement, mixing informative diabetes dialog with popular country music

Acton, MA. – April 14th, 2008 – Dr. Stephen C. Clement, Chief Medical Advisor for MyCareTeam, Inc and Chief of the Georgetown Diabetes Center at Georgetown University Hospital, has launched a monthly talk show related to diabetes on XM Radio, Station 10. Dr. Clement sits down with Country Dan on the last Wednesday of each month from 7:00 – 9:00 PM. Mixed in with playing country music, Dr. Clement answers questions from callers related to their diabetes.

“It’s very exciting to have such a great venue on XM Radio for discussing diabetes with listeners”, said Dr. Clement. “As the United States diabetes population surpasses 21 million, more and more people are looking for avenues outside of the traditional physician’s office to discuss the disease on a regular basis.”

Dr. Clement is chief of the Georgetown Diabetes Center at Georgetown University Hospital and one of the founders of MyCareTeam, Inc. He also serves as interim Chief of Endocrinology, Department of Medicine, Georgetown University Hospital. In addition to running the Diabetes Center, Dr. Clement is active in clinical research, performing clinical trials on the development of oral insulin, the use of insulin to prevent cardiovascular disease, and in the prevention of Type 2 diabetes with pharmacotherapy. He has published widely and is a recognized international leader in the area of diabetes care.
